Christina Rolfe is a long-time employee of the Chehalis Tribe. Christina's son Kody suffered from an AVM on May 7th. He was life-flighted to Tacoma General and then transferred to Harborview Medical Center in Seattle.

Cody was then transported by ambulatory jet to a hospital in Chicago, the #1 facility in the country that specializes in Kody's medical condition. His insurance covered his flight to Chicago but will not cover the costs back home. With his insurance maximum for rehabilitation being 30 days/year, they estimate his cost for return air ambulance to be $39,900 (out of pocket), along with family travel, food, lodging, etc. Also, beyond the 30 days/year covered by insurance for rehabilitation services, the cost is $5,000 a day out of pocket.

Please join us in raising funds for the Rolfe Family, to help them manage through this very difficult time.
